Objectives

• To improve maternal and child health.

• To contribute practice of family planning.

• To ensure the reach of reproductive health education to every individual including adolescents.
Why Maternal Mortality is important?

- Important measure of human and socioeconomic development
- Reveal women’s overall status, access to health
- Identify risks of pregnancy and childbirth
- Diagnosing issues
- Effectiveness of existing programs

Maternal & Child Health
Why do women die during delivery?

- Severe bleeding
- Unsafe abortion
- Infections
- Complications
- Malaria and AIDS

Every day, approximately 830 women die from preventable causes related to pregnancy and childbirth. (WHO)
89% of pregnancy-related deaths were preventable
Approximately 15 percent of all births are complicated by a potentially fatal condition that requires emergency care (World Health Organization, 1999)

How to prevent this?
Poor women in remote areas are the least likely to receive adequate health care. It is especially true for regions with low numbers of skilled health workers. Millions of births are not assisted by a midwife, a doctor or a trained nurse.
